Circularity in the Olive Industry

Webinar on sustainability and circular bioeconomy of olive value chain

27 September 2021, 08:30–17:00 CEST

Online & Instituto de la Grasa, Sevilla

About this event

The Phenoliva project is an EIT Food innovation project funded by the European Institute of Innovation and Technology (EIT), a body of the European Union. Phenoliva turns the side-stream management problem of the olive oil industry into a great opportunity. Antioxidants extracted from olive side-streams are used in foods and cosmetics as valuable natural additives. Full circularity is achieved by including biogas production and soil health as key pillars in the Phenoliva concept.

This public event brings together farmers, scientists, small and big businesses to discuss today's challenges and new opportunities in the olive sector and beyond. Experts present their experience and recent research in different fields. Social, economic and environmental aspects are elucidated. Roundtable discussions allow a high level of interaction. A pilot plant tour at Instituto de la Grasa gives unique insights into current research in the field of agricultural side-stream valorisation.

The event takes place in Sevilla and remote online access is possible. Tickets are limited, secure your place today! On-site participation costs 30€, lunch included. Online participation is free of charge.
