Summary

«What does it mean to have a food system that is good to the planet? What does it mean to have a food system that is fair to producers? What does it mean to have a food system which actually nourishes us with fair and nutritious food?» These questions – and many more – are addressed in the documentary In Our Hands: Seeding Change (2017). The film follows a group of farmers and food producers in the United Kingdom over one year (2016), to observe their stories of success and the challenges they have faced. In Our Hands portrays a movement of farmers and food workers who aims to create vibrant farms, living soils, thriving food markets and a fairer food system for all.

Panelists

Christian Schöb is a professor of Agricultural Ecology at ETH Zurich. In his research he takes an ecological perspective on crop plant communities, motivated by the concept that in transferring ecological knowledge to agricultural systems, a more sustainable, yet productive agriculture can be achieved. Christian holds a MSc in Biology and a PhD from the Institute of Geography, University of Bern. In addition to various positions at Swiss institutions, he has worked as a research scientist in Spain, Chile, the U.K., and Australia.

Lukas Peter is co-founder and member of the operations team of the cooperative "basimilch - the cheese dairy cooperative in Dietikon" which is organized according to principles of solidarity-based agriculture. Lukas Peter holds a PhD in Political Philosophy from the University of Zurich and is now working as a research assistant at the Department of Philosophy at the University of St. Gallen. When possible he works as a herdsman in the alps in Valais during the summer, and otherwise lives with his family in Zurich.
