

LINA KIM (she/hers)

My name is Lina, and I moved to Zürich from the US to start my PhD in fall 2021. The transition from life in America to the US, on top of that of industry to academia, was quite difficult for me; I couldn't have managed without the immense support of friends, communities, mentors, and administrators. I'm happy to share my experiences with PhD struggles and support you in yours, though of course we can additionally discuss clinical implications of computational microbiology! I was a chaplain in my past life, so am also open to chatting about spirituality or interfaith topics.
